Observations

By Bob Walsh

WHY A CURE . . . IF WE CAN PREVENT?

We believe it is unfortunate that there seems to be only two major schools of thought concerning the immediate economic future of the United States. One wants to do something drastic to halt the recession. The other believes it will cure itself and does not wish to act until it takes on the proportions of a runaway team of untrained horses.

Most people are earning their regular pay or salary without interruption and no hysteria is evident. However, a major share of them are holding onto their dollars. They are waiting for several reasons . . . mainly, either security or a hope for lower prices.

Talk of excise tax removal has not spurred the purchase of cars. It now is so late in 1958 that many have postponed such a purchase in hopes that the taxes might come off, prices might come down, or 1959 models would come out so early they could talk themselves into waiting. And they have waited.

The politicians, especially the Democrats, who now speak in the roll of the "outs", are offering the standard panaceas. They want tax reductions, public works, and anything that costs billions and makes Washington look concerned.

On the opposite bench sits the President and many others who apparently believe this is a normal part of American economy that will work itself out and boom once again. And no matter what temporary answer you may have as a cure, they may be right.

Some believe this is a "made" recession, created either to stop inflation or to put labor in a poor bargaining position . . . or maybe a little of both. Their fear is that those who made it may not be able to control it.

There are others who wonder if it is a normal reaction to an inflated market, such as we have been having for two or three years. The spiral couldn't go on forever and many factors could enter into a natural drop in demand, a surfeit of inventory, and a fear of an over-fat market on the part of the investor. In our type of economy there is apt to be pain to parallel every gain. We are hurting now.

We have written that 1958 may well be the wringing out year. And it will not surprise us if we must live with a hard selling situation well into fall. There will be those who won't have jobs, a growing number that is apt to fatten quickly when the college and high school graduates join the throng. And there will be more little businesses, not sufficiently financed to carry over lean months, which will go bankrupt.

That is America. That is America if we are willing to accept completely free enterprise and uncontrolled capitalism. And most of us, with confidence in our abilities and a fear of "isms", choose to take our chances in such a state of freedom.

But need it be so? Can we not provide better cushions than those that now exist, and should we not be doing more to prevent such periods than we do to cure them?

To us the spiral of inflation has been a constant threat, yet it apparently was not good politics for either party to take positive steps to stop it. Now that it has yielded its natural result we have many with eyes on the voting finger of the hungry and the owners of quiet cash registers.

But as long as labor each year asks for more money, and gets it, and as long as industry immediately raises prices to make it necessary for labor to ask for more money to meet increasing costs . . . where is the end?

As long as wage increases are based on the cost of living index, which naturally goes up when industry uses wage jumps as an excuse for boosting prices, we are in a dizzy spiral of inflation.

Who will stop it?

Not the politician who wants the vote of labor and at the same time needs the contributions of industry for his campaign.

Not the public which is divided into two camps, management and labor, both wanting more when the silver ring comes around, and neither organized for the purpose of stopping inflation. Labor leaders won't hold their jobs unless they fight for more benefits. Industrial leaders want no part of politicians who suggest controls.

It is just a little frightening to study this circle while Russia gradually moves into a strong position for world economic competition. We want no part of the "isms" yet we seem afraid to take positive steps which will make democracy and free enterprise work.

We are not suggesting an answer here. We are saying that we hear no answers from our leaders. We hear only the politicians who seek votes through questionable remedies for what they call an emergency. We hear other politicians who say, "Take it easy. Your hungry stomach will be well filled by prosperity eventually".

But who is doing something about a permanent answer to inflation and its inevitable shadow, deflation? Are we going into the coming climb of population and industrial expansion with nothing to prevent the eventual bust, a bust that will be far worse than anything we have known?

Another wave of prosperity will cause us to set such thoughts aside and will make it impossible to constructively act on measures that will prevent trouble. Now is when we would like to hear the answers. So far we have listened in vain.

ASIDES

LIKE TO SPEAK

The Republican party no doubt will be eulogized next Tuesday evening when President Eisenhower is heard on CBS at 10:30 in the evening. He will be speaking at a dinner of the Republican National committee in honor of GOP congressional members. It will be televised by CBS. ***

PENNSYLVANIA POLITICS

This is the month the Keystoneers will pick their candidates for the big one in the fall. The GOP race for governor has a field that is crowded like Stassen vs. McGonigle, Livengood, and Vaughn.

We say it that way because certainly at least two of the trio have strong ties with existing segments of the machine. Livengood has been active in Republican politics for many years and should have many friends among the regulars who either will support him or will do nothing for the opposition. McGonigle claims party support, which may not be sporting, but it is not strange.

If Stassen gathers together any kind of a machine at all, and his supporters do any real work, his opposition could be sufficiently divided to let him in. He certainly has more national stature than any of them, and his record as a governor in Minnesota was good enough to make him presidential timber.

The opposition is doing itself no good with the remarks about his not being a native son. On this basis millions of us in this state have no right to hold office. As for us we wouldn't care if he moved into the state this week. The deciding point should be his ability.

Whoever wins that GOP scramble will have Pittsburgh's Lawrence with whom to contend. He is expected to trounce Furman. And we doubt if any of the old guard candidates, and certainly not those with old line support, can beat the combination that is aligned against them. That line-up includes their own ultra conservative record, the recession, and the big city vote which Lawrence is expected to carry. ***

MACHINES FOR SCHOOLS

Much excess material in the form of machine tools, such as lathes, grinding and drilling machines, and related equipment, now is available to American schools. The actual distribution is being handled by state agencies for surplus property, working with the United States Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The changing pattern of defense has made about 13,000 machine tools excess in the past year. The number is expected to be even greater this year, and probably will grow. It is hoped it can be used for an expanded youth training program. ***

The lead story in "Pennsylvania History", quarterly journal of the Pennsylvania Historical Society, published this month, is written by Ernie Miller. The title is "Pennsylvania's Last Indian School", which was published in much briefer form in the Observer, August 11, 1955, under the title, "Goodbye Indian School".

The story concerns the elementary school on the Cornplanter grant which closed in 1953. Facing the first page of the story is a frontispiece painting of John O'Bail, or Kiontwogky, or Cornplanter, the Seneca chief. ***

Hoover Book Opposes Summit Meeting

By Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON. -- The tragedy of an American President who went to Europe to negotiate a lasting peace and returned to defeat and despair is the theme of "The Ordeal of Woodrow Wilson," just published by Herbert Hoover.

While this is the history of 1918 and after, the Hoover memoir, with the new light it throws on the Wilson ordeal, will inevitably be related to the question of a summit conference and whether President Eisenhower should again sit at the conference table with other heads of government.

What Hoover suggests is that by the very nature of the American Presidency a President is disqualified from the face-to-face bargaining of the conference table. This same opinion has recently been used by others as an argument against a summit meeting. The Hoover pronouncement will strengthen the growing sentiment in Washington against a conference with the Russians at the summit.

At 83, Hoover has written a moving account of events in which he himself played an important part as director of relief and rehabilitation for a world stricken with famine and pestilence in the aftermath of World War I. Seldom, if ever, has a President of one party written in such tribute to the President of another party.

As he indicates in his book, Hoover, a Republican, supported Wilson, the Democrat, in almost every phase of the war and the effort to make a peace. This was held against him by Republicans who said, as his own political star began to rise, that he belonged to the other party. Yet Hoover became President in 1928, and it is an ironic commentary that, having gone through his ordeal in the worst depression the nation has ever suffered, he was defeated by a Democrat in 1932.

For all the warmth of his tribute to Wilson, Hoover finds that he was "fooled" by the statesmen of Europe because of his unfamiliarity with "old world diplomacy." Throughout his narrative Hoover tends to sit a scheming, cynical Europe against a good, innocent America.

There is a suggestion that the two can never meet, and in the bitterness of his experience at the Paris Peace Conference may lie the explanation for Hoover's later conviction of the inevitability of America's isolation. The views of the former President in the months leading up to World War II amounted to a fortress-America concept.

The Hoover conclusions bear most directly on the present moment when they touch on Wilson's role at the Paris Peace Conference. Hoover says that he and others close to Wilson sought to dissuade him from going to Europe. One of Wilson's handicaps, according to Hoover, was that he had helped to kindle the fires of extreme nationalism by preaching "self-determination" of all peoples. Hoover writes:

"Still another of Mr. Wilson's obstacles stemmed from the difference between the American and Allied forms of government. Ours is a government of separate powers. Under the parliamentary governments of the Allies, the executive and legislative leadership is combined. A prime minister spoke for the majority of his parliament and could assure the ratification of treaties into which he entered. Moreover, on the floor of the lower house he could look his opponents in the eye and deliver them instant answers.

"Under our separation of powers, the President could give no such assurances. Furthermore, the Congressional election of 1918 had damaged the confidence of the Allied statesmen in the President's ability to speak for the American people and the Congress."

In some respects Hoover's latest book is reminiscent of his "America's First Crusade," published a month after Pearl Harbor. That book was criticized as presenting a shallow view of an idealistic President hopelessly embattled with the grasping, greedy politicians of France and Britain.

In this latest work, which appears as Hoover is recovering from a gall bladder operation, there is surprising drama, considering the austere surface he presents. Wakened before dawn in his Paris hotel and given the final draft of the Versailles Treaty, Hoover says he got up and tramped the streets in despair at the compromises Wilson had been brought to accept. It was Hoover's ordeal, too, and in a sense the book is his own justification as well as that of the defeated, despairing Wilson.

HAROLD E. STASSEN, who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor in the May primaries, is scheduled to arrive in Warren this Sunday evening with his running mates.

Accompanying him will be Frank C. Hilton, who is running for lieutenant governor; Albert R. Pechan, candidate for Secretary of Internal Affairs; and possibly Weldon B. Heyburn, contender for the U. S. Senate post.

On Monday morning, May 5, Stassen and Company will be present for a public meeting in the Warren County Court House. This will start at 9 a.m. and will be followed by a press conference at 9:30.

The candidates will leave for Corry before noon.

Registration for Established Camp, which is becoming the most popular with the older girls, is handled by each girl who wants to attend. The date for established camp is July 6 to 18th, and girls interested are reminded to register early, as the one session will necessarily limit the number of campers.

Rockefeller, Harriman, Williams In Politics

By Doris Fleeson

NEW YORK -- New York legislative leaders gave Nelson Rockefeller a significant boost for the GOP nomination for Governor this week.

They did it by electing him chairman of a new legislative committee that will work to modernize and simplify the state constitution. It will keep him in the public eye and also furnish him an appealing issue for the election campaign against Gov. Averell Harriman.

Leonard Hall, formerly Republican National Chairman, is still in the race and apparently more popular with New York City leaders than Rockefeller. But two upstaters also regarded as aspirants for the nomination -- Senator Walter J. Mahoney and Assembly Speaker Oswald D. Heck -- were the key figures in what amounts to tentative approval of the Rockefeller bid.

To date Rockefeller declines to label himself a candidate. He seems not yet convinced that his name does not negate his political appeal, though most observers feel the present family record of social and civic service has erased all the unhappy aspects of the Rockefeller past.

He has never run for elective office and would be the first member of his family to do so. To that extent, Republicans would be flying blind if they nominate him.

They will be risking the effect of his name. They do not know if Nelson Rockefeller has a real gift for the hustings which are so utterly different from the sheltered area of his life to date. They would expect Gov. Harriman -- so obviously an available candidate for President in 1960 -- to spare nothing in his own effort to run up an impressive election plurality for its effect in the Democratic national convention.

Some cynics express the view that Republicans are willing to let Rockefeller "take the fall" using his own money, since the trend is Democratic anyway. Others just as stoutly maintain that only a good government candidate like Rockefeller can win and that his youth and vigor -- he will be 50 in July -- would count heavily against Harriman, who will be 67 next November.

Democrats seem to be no further along in their quest for the best candidate against United States Senator Irving Ives, Republican incumbent. Ives has often been ill and is not too effective in Washington, but he has that valuable intangible, a good name in the state.

Many people believe that with its usual lack of imagination, Tammany will draft Mayor Robert F. Wagner for the race as he is a proved vote-getter and will satisfy the organization leaders of the city.

What is new on the Democratic grapevine is talk of an informal alliance between Govs. Harriman and Mennen Williams of Michigan with the aim of keeping the party nationally well to the left of Vice President Nixon. If re-elected this fall, both Governors should be strongly in control of their state delegations at the 1960 convention.

This report suggests, too, that Harriman will remain only available but that Williams will set the 1960 pace in the state nominating primaries, including California. It seems probable that Williams, a skillful politician, would make any firm plan about that until next November shows what Democratic favorite sons must be tactfully handled in all pre-convention maneuverings. But there is no doubt that Harriman and Williams see eye to eye on most elements of modern Democracy in the party sense.

PLENTY TO DO

The excitement of fun in the wonderful outdoors should have been driven home to anyone visiting the sportsman's show in Beaty cafeteria last Friday and Saturday. Equipment for everything from skin-diving to leisurely mowing one's lawn was on display.

What impressed us the most was the possibility that this area finally is awakening to the broad plane of pleasure that is to be found when one looks to the fields and streams for his spare time activities. And immediately before us is the possibility that much of this will be even more appreciated and utilized if the river is cleaned up through the construction of sewage disposal plants and the erection of a dam that will provide an even flow of water during the summer months.

Water played a major roll in the show, ranging from a backyard pool to powerful outboard motors, so stream-lined that they rival the appearance of land vehicles. Also helping to ring the room were many boats to be powered by such motors, though there were some engines exhibited which would have required much more boat than those on the floor.

The backyard pool on display was about four feet deep. They have them in all sizes up to 28 feet in diameter. These go down to eight feet at one end for shallow diving. A sand base is created and the plastic flooring rests on it for cushioning purposes. The tank can be patched if a leak develops. The one on display costs $200. But you mustn't forget the cost of water. Either you must purify a supply for repeated use or pay the cost of a continual flow of fresh water.

The show depicted the life of tomorrow for those who have the dollars and time to make their home their center of recreation. Surrounding the pool was lawn furniture, decked out in pulchritude, and nearby was a lawnmower such as we never have seen before. In it you sit, press the accelerator, and away you sputter. The mower is under your . . . you. And if this becomes a bit warm, you take a dunk in the pool. A happy combination that should make even lawn shortening something to keep you at home.

About two weeks ago a fleet of motorboats went to Pittsburgh on a week end outing. At the show many attractive motors were on display that would keep a boat splitting the current at a brisk clip. One of those with a display, Bob McDannel, is opening an outboard agency in Warren where he will service all makes and will sell the Mercury. This is tomorrow.

Once the dam or some kind of flood control device is completed, the river should be a major center of activity in this area. The value of property along the stream will jump upward. Today many look at land along the river and constantly measure the distance from the water's edge with their eye. Their central thought is the loss they would suffer if their cottage or home were located too close to the average river height.

The recreational prosperity which accompanies a construction like the dam cannot be measured in advance. It requires no publicity. Given clean water, and a constant flow of it, business comes rushing in. Up go cottages, in go boats, and the area becomes a center for vacationers and those who enjoy living full time at a stream's edge.

The background provided by our hills, and the sport also to be enjoyed thereon, add to the value of the river valleys if those valleys are made useable. As they will be if a dam goes up.

The sportsman's show had much of Warren's tomorrow in its display. Much of today, too, but even more of tomorrow.

ROYALTY ATTENDS

Those of you who make annual trips to Stratford for various festival attractions might like to reserve a seat for the presentation of "The Winter's Tale" on July 31. This date is made more interesting, and no doubt much in demand, because Princess Margaret will visit the Ontario city on that date and will attend this command performance.

That afternoon a special command jazz concert will be given for the royal party by Duke Elling-ton, who will write a new composition for this event.

But don't rush for tickets. The public sale has been suspended until the committee has completed its arrangements. Miss Margaret will arrive in the morning and will leave after the play. Little time, and no doubt a major crowd.

PAPERBACKS AT CHAUTAUQUA

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle will save money and have more books at its disposal in its 81st year when it uses paperbacks this summer. With hardbacks going up and many fine titles being published with paperbacks, the answer is obvious.

Instead of increasing the annual fee, under which only two or three hardback books could be included, the cost is being reduced. And despite the reduction more books will be possible with the use of the paper covers. Of course, members may buy hardcovers of the same books if they wish to spend the money. They will be available in the bookshops.

This is not really a new idea. Back in 1870 and 1880 the C.L.S.C. used small paperbacks, costing ten cents, and including such titles as John Heyl Vincent's "English History", Henry W. Warren's "Studies of the Stars", and William F. Phelps' "What Is Education".

Some of the paperbacks to be used in the course this summer are "Beethoven", "Gandhi", "Atomic Radiation and Life", "Profiles in Courage", "The Louisville Story", and "The Travail of Religious Liberty".

Television and Radio

By John Crosby

THE EXPERT AND THE INEXPERT

I'm terribly grateful to Hallmark for its distinguished production of "Dial M for Murder" because I missed it on Broadway and I can't remember witnessing so pleasant a ninety minutes on television in a long time. As well it ought to be because this was pretty much the same production that ran on Broadway for a couple of years.

Again Maurice Evans played the quick-witted fellow out to murder his wife. John Williams was again Inspector Hubbard, which may be the best part in the play; and Anthony Dawson was again the man who became the corpse. The only important change in the cast was Rosemary Harris, a lovely girl who played the intended corpse rather more tentatively and breathlessly than she would have if she'd had the same long run as the other principals.

There's no doubt about it; these long runs when transplanted to television have an enviable smoothness. It's not just that the actors have the over-powering authority of long experience but the writing has been honed and pruned and polished by tryouts and performance. "Dial M" is nothing important, of course—a murder story well put together and skillfully played and produced. It is excellent theater. It may be asking too much that we get more of this sort of thing on television because the conditions are wrong; there's not enough time and not nearly enough money.

However, the night after seeing "Dial M" I went to the little off Broadway theater, the York, where Tennessee Williams' two short plays "Garden District" are playing. Now here is almost the opposite theatrical experience. Williams, a monstrously talented fellow, has tossed most of the rules out of the window—his biggest scene is a monologue about something that happened to somebody else months earlier—but the raw brilliance is there. It's a memorable theatrical evening.

Now the point I'm trying laboriously to make here is that we ought to have on television either one or the other. If the expertly tailored trifle can't be managed on television, then we ought to get more of the raw genius. Or if we can't have raw genius, let's settle for expert hackwork. But we're not getting that either. What we're getting is inexpert hackwork and that,

I think, is inexcusable.

Last week end in a series called "No Warning" which is simply a new title for that old series "Panic" (although these films were not seen on television), the opening episode was a conspicuous example of inexpert hackwork. It was about a father so wrapped up in his business that he fails to understand his son's real problems until the kid is ready to commit suicide. It was an ineptly written suspense yarn and even the acting by that old pro Everett Sloane was monotonous and annoying.

Years ago, television could take a story like that and charge it with passion and enthusiasm, if not with literary genius. But now the enthusiasm and the fun have drained away and they have not been replaced by expertise.

Pretty much the same team that brought forth "Pinocchio," Yasha Frank, contributing the book, Alec Wilder and William Engvick, music and lyrics, were responsible for "Hansel and Gretel" on NBC the other night. On the whole the hour-long show was a lot of fun but not so much as "Pinocchio" for a number of reasons.

For one thing, maybe I'm tired of fairy stories. We have been up to our eyebrows in them all year long. For another, "Pinocchio" is a great story that lends itself more to an hour than "Hansel and Gretel." For still another, "Hansel and Gretel" got just a little too itchy-poo for my taste and even for a child's taste. However, it was an awe-inspiring cast with Rise Stevens, as the mother, Barbara Cook as Gretel, Red Buttons as Hansel, and Rudy Vallee almost invisible behind a moustache as papa, Hans Conreid as a mighty wicked witch, and Sondra Lee as a sort of assistant witch.

I'd just as soon not see any more fairy tales for awhile, though.

WBEN Sportscasters Make Their 1958 Baseball Predictions

With the baseball season in full swing, each of WBEN's four sportscasters was contacted for his predictions on the outcome in the fight for the pennant. The secret ballots revealed that all are in agreement on who will be on top this coming September. Each picked the New York Yankees as the winning American League team and Milwaukee as the top National League team, with the Yankees winning the 1958 World Series. The WBEN Radio and TV sports personalities are (from left to right) Chuck Healy, Dick Rifenburg, Ralph Hubbell and Don Cunningham. Time will tell just how good WBEN's predictors are.

NIGHT AND DAY—Erin Patrick, singer and actress, will appear both night and day on NBC-TV, on visits to the "Today" morning program and the nighttime "Jack Paar Show."

Portraying a happily married young couple, Jacqueline Mayo and Skip Homeier look on pensively as they are about to become millionaires by receiving $1,000,000 from an anonymous benefactor, in the fictitious "Story of Wally Bannister," on The Millionaire Wednesday night, May 7, at 9 o'clock over WBEN-TV.

MAN IN THE MOOD — A photographer catches Dave Garroway in expressions of pensiveness, concentration, curiosity and mirth during the brief periods on NBC-TV's "Today" when the television cameras are not on him. Garroway will take the program to the Governors' Conference at Miami Beach, Fla., May 19 and 20. "Today" is presented mornings, Monday through Friday.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER — Rip Van Winkle (E. G. Marshall) is astounded after his 20-year sleep to find his daughter Judith (Leora Dana) grown, married and the image of his late wife in NBC-TV's Thursday, May 8, presentation of "Rip Van Winkle." Leora Dana plays a dual role, that of Dame Van Winkle and, later, that of the daughter, Judith, in the production on "Shirley Temple's Storybook."

Civil Defense Drill Scheduled For May 6

In order to provide the public at large with further opportunity actually to practice basic self-protection measures, namely, to listen for and to react appropriately to public sounding of the standard public action signals, a statewide Civil Defense "public participation drill" will be held at some previously undisclosed time between the hours of 9:00 and 11:00 A.M., E.D.T., on Tuesday, May 6, 1958. Essential details of this drill are outlined immediately below.

A. Start of the drill will be marked by public sounding of the long, steady "Alert" or "Attention" signal on local sirens, horns or whistles. Sounding of this signal will be accompanied by local broadcast of a special emergency message to the effect that "a simulated air raid warning, marking the start of the day's statewide civil defense test, has been received and that hostile aircraft are now assumed to be approaching Pennsylvania from the north."

B. Except for the fact that everyone should listen to determine whether he, or she, can hear, or "receive", special emergency messages as locally broadcast, the public at large will not be expected to take special action upon public sounding of that particular "Alert", or "Attention", signal first to be sounded on the morning of Tuesday, May 6.

C. Some time later in the morning, local sirens, horns or whistles will publicly sound the long, pulsating "Take Cover" signal. Sounding of this signal will be accompanied by local broadcast of a simulated emergency message to the effect that "the 'Take Cover' signal has sounded and that everyone should immediately 'take cover'."

D. Immediately upon public sounding of the "Take Cover" signal on local sirens, horns or whistles, all members of the general public will be expected:

(1) If on the sidewalk or elsewhere out-of-doors, to "take cover" in a nearby building or other suitable place; or

(2) If driving an automobile, to pull to the side and stop, leaving at least one lane and all intersections open for use by emergency vehicles. (The only exception is that drivers actually on the Pennsylvania Turnpike, Schuylkill Expressway and Penn-Lincoln Parkway may continue to move, unless directed to stop in the vicinity of points of entry or exit.)

E. Shortly following public sounding of the "Take Cover" signal, local sirens, horns or whistles will again publicly sound the long, steady "Alert" or "Attention" signal. This second sounding of the "Attention" signal will be accompanied by local broadcast of another special message to the effect that "the air is now assumed to be free of hostile aircraft and that traffic may resume movement and people their normal pursuits."

F. Immediately upon public sounding of the day's second "Alert" or "Attention" signal, traffic may resume movement and people their normal pursuits. This will mark the end of the public participation drill.

Sparked by a galaxy of specialists speaking in the field, the Cardiac-in-Industry Conference to be held in Kane, Tuesday, May 6th, will see industrialists, labor leaders, social workers, physicians, insurance executives, industrial nurses and other interested persons gather to study the growing problem of the physically handicapped heart disease victim.

Scheduled from 9:00 a.m., registration time, to the close of the afternoon panel at 3:30 p.m., the meeting will feature discussion on five important viewpoints concerning the mounting number of executives and workers alike who are being kept away from productive jobs by heart disease.

Dr. Robert Donaldson, Warren physician and member of the executive board of the Pennsylvania Heart Association, who is serving as general chairman of the conference, will chair the morning session.

The conference will open with a 20 minute talk on the subject "Let's Look at the Cardiac in Industry," by Harry E. Tebrock, Douglaston, New York, medical director, Sylvania Products, Inc. Dr. Tebrock, well known in industrial medical circles, has professorships at N.Y.U. and the university of Miami. Writing almost constantly in the field of medicine, he is now serving as medical advisor, Common Cold Foundation and to the National Association of Manufacturers.

"The Law Looks at the Cardiac" will be presented by John H. Cartwright, Ridgway, Workmen's Compensation Referee for the Tenth District. Mr. Cartwright, a former Elk County solicitor, has served as president of the Elk County Bar Association.

Alan Jones, Rehabilitation Counselor for the Pennsylvania Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation, will round out the morning session with the subject "Let's Rehabilitate the Cardiac . . . And, Put Him Back to Work." Mr. Jones, Williamsport, has been with the Bureau since 1947 and gained extensive experience at the Air Force Installation, Hot Springs, Arkansas. He is currently president-elect of the Tioga County Heart Association.

The Conference, which features other speakers than those mentioned, is in cooperation with Potter, Elk and Cameron Counties, and has been designed, according to the conference committee, to answer some of the questions that industry, labor and the general public ask about the heart disease victim. The general public is invited, and reservations may be made through your local Heart Association or by writing to: McKean County Heart Committee, 200 Pleasant Street, Bradford, Pa.

Dr. Donaldson has pointed out that there is no registration fee, and the only charge will be for the luncheon. The entire day's conference will be held at the Kane Elks Club, Kane.

Double augers cut, mix, and convey even hard-packed or frozen silage to the impeller which, operating like a hammer mill, picks up and throws silage out the spout using less horsepower than "vacuum cleaner" types. The collector arm is pushed around the silo by Double Driving Drums for extra leverage... positive traction. Double belts provide positive drive. Single cable suspension permits lifting machine out of silage between unloadings. Reduces rusting and machine can't freeze in. Fits any silo, 12 to 16 ft. in diameter. ### GOOD SHOW

The Farrah Grotto gave the area sportsmen a real show last Friday and Saturday when everything from the latest guns to ankle boots were displayed in Beaty cafeteria. For the fisherman and hunter there were eye-openers to be found.

A German rifle valued at about $1500 was caught in many a pair of hands and fondled affectionately. The property of John Rix, who had a large collection of guns on display, it was an over and under rifle that would sight in so perfectly that a bullet from one barrel could be laid on top of its companion from the other.

A new Savage was in this collection to attract our "feel" and we could be happy with it. So happy we didn't dare go back for a second look. There also was an over and under German weapon which included two twelve gauge barrels on top and a rifle barrel centered between them at the bottom. Despite all this, it was very light.

Lightness and beautiful balance are the outstanding characteristics of the modern gun, whether it be rifle, revolver, or scatter barrel. One .22 rifle seen in two displays was made mostly of aluminum. It contained steel where needed for rifling and other wearing parts, but it had so much aluminum that it weighed only four pounds. A small load to lug about for target fun or to knock off a few squirrels.

There was a compact pair of field glasses which looked like a small leather-covered jewel case. Press a lever and out peeked two lenses, which could be focused with a knob near the hinge. Nice for the car dashboard compartment or for milady's handbag.

There were light trailers which could be hooked onto any car with little strain, and in which you could spend the night, protected from cold or rain. And one was a mite larger, with a table and stove.

There was a line of skin-diving paraphernalia which might be more fun around here than many would believe. There are deep points in the river and in some of our lakes and streams which might reveal interesting underwater life. You could get a look at some of those muskies, pike, and other attractions of the deep pools. The mysteries of the river could be unveiled in many exciting moments, and you might come up with some underwater photographic results such as we haven't seen done in these parts.

A little imagination, applied to the many advances in equipment and the development of new articles for the use of those who relish the open road and the freshwater streams, opens up many new vistas in these Pennsylvania mountains and valleys.

HE WON'T JUMP

If your garden has bunny trouble, put up a fence, an eighteen-inch fence made of one-inch poultrywire or one by two turkey wire. See that it is snug to the ground, because old long-ears will look for a way under even though he will refuse to use his lanky legs to get him over.

Repellents aren't much good for several reasons. Some are not healthy for humans, and even the safe agents must be sprayed on after every rain.

The fence will last. It can be taken down, rolled up, and replaced the next year. And once up your troubles are over.

WHAT KILLED THEM

The first three months of this year 2662 deer were killed in Pennsylvania. Vehicles got 1380 of them and the farmers shot 101 that were picknicking on crop land. Starved to death were 392.

PIONEER TRIP

Most of the scenes, animals, and hardships enjoyed and endured by the Lewis and Clark expedition about 150 years ago can be seen in a movie made by Hal H. Harrison. It is called "Beyond the Shining Mountain", and will be shown at Chautauqua July 28. Mr. Harrison lugged a camera 30,000 miles through twelve western states by pack trips, boat, and foot, to catch some of the feeling which must have been experienced by the two hard pioneers.

STOCKED

In case you haven't heard about it, and so many probably have that you may be too late, the following streams have been stocked recently. With fishing a bit light on the streams this year, you might enjoy a catch or two. They are:

West Branch Tionesta, Two Mile Run, Beaver Creek, East Hickory Creek, Kinzua Creek, South Branch Kinzua, and South Branch Tionesta.

CRITICAL PERIOD

We now are in the midst of one of the most critical periods of the season for fires in the fields and woods. Two days of warm weather and wind can turn the foliage and ground into tinder.

Two things you can do. One is obvious... care with fire and little use of it as possible in the woods. The other is to be on the alert and tell the telephone operator if you see a fire. She will contact the nearest fire officer.

MARY WELLINGTON GALE

How spiritual understanding of God is helping mankind to meet the challenges of the atomic age will be the topic of a lecture on Christian Science to be delivered in Warren Tuesday, May 6th, by Mary Wellington Gale, of San Francisco.

Open to the public without charge, the lecture will be sponsored by the members of the First Church of Christ Scientist of Warren. Mrs. Gale will speak in the Church Edifice, 312 Market st., at 8:15 p.m. (DST). Her subject will be "Christian Science, Religion For The Present And The Future".

VETERANS who are patients at Warren State Hospital are shown as they started to fill the cafe set-up at Saturday's show, made possible by card tables provided through the efforts of the Bradford Dads of Foreign Service Veterans. Maurice Baxter, hospital advisor, is at the right.

HARLES D. CARLSON, son of and Mrs. Clarence E. Carlson, Route 1, Akeley, was recently elected to the office of "noble ruler" of Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, the largest and largest national agricultural social fraternity in the United States.

Carlson is a sixth semester dairy science major at the Pennsylvania State University. He is also an active member of the Dairy Science Club, Agriculture Student Council, associate editor of the Penn State Dairyman, Inter-fraternity Council, and inter-mural sports.

He is also the recipient of Alpha Gamma Rho's Martin V. Rockwell Achievement Award and the Sunset Scholarship.

HOW LARGE IS A DIME? The fact that an automobile cannot stop on a dime was proven to Warren high school students last week in a demonstration staged through the courtesy of Nationwide Insurance.

You see in the auto Bob Eggleston, a student who drove the car to a speed of 20 MPH. His reaction distance was 16 feet, 10 inches; braking distance, 23 feet, two inches; total, 40 feet.

Another student, Beth Francis, traveled the same speed. Her figures were 17 feet, five inches; 32 feet, four inches; 49 feet, nine inches, respectively.

Wally Jewell, a teacher, was tested at 30 MPH. The results: 25 feet, two inches, reaction distance; 47 feet, four inches, braking distance; total, 72 feet, six inches.

Police officer Charlie Musante, at a speed of 40 MPH, had a reaction distance of 32 feet, 1 inch; braking distance of 82 feet, two inches; total, 114 feet, three inches.

Compare these figures with those on the Stopping Distance Chart below. They are listed as average.

Speed in m.p.h.	Feet traveled per second	Driver Reaction Distance *	Vehicle Braking Distance	Total Stopping Distance
20	29.33	22	22	44
25	36.66	27.5	34.5	62
30	44	33	50	83
35	51.33	38.5	67.5	106
40	58.66	44	88	132
50	73.33	55	138	193
60	88	66	199	265
70	102.66	77	293	370

* Based on 3/4 second reaction time.

PERCEPTION DISTANCE

In normal driving you must add to Total Stopping Distance an extra factor—Perception Distance. This is the distance traveled from the point where you could and should recognize a hazard to where you do actually recognize it. This distance varies widely, depending on your alertness.
